Dan Cooperman
Of Counsel
DLA Piper

Dan Cooperman focuses his practice on corporate governance and board of directors issues and consultation pertaining to the organization and management of a global legal department and global law firm.

Dan has a nearly 40-year career in law and business, most notably serving from 1997 until 2007 as senior vice president and general counsel at Oracle under Larry Ellison and from 2007 to 2010 as senior vice president and general counsel of Apple under Steve Jobs. With DLA Piper, he continues to focus on issues related to corporate governance and boards of directors, as well as the role of the general counsel and management of global corporate law departments.

Dan also serves as a member of the board of directors of Molina Healthcare, Inc., a Fortune 500 managed care company, as well as several startup companies. He serves as a strategic advisor to Institutional Venture Partners, a premier late-stage venture capital firm, and its portfolio companies.
