

GLOBAL TECHNOLOGY SUMMIT

Tom Rodgers

Senior Vice President and Managing Director
McKesson Ventures

Tom leads the McKesson Venture Fund, which is focused on identifying and helping build companies that drive towards a stronger, more sustainable future for our health care industry. Target investments span a broad section of the healthcare industry, including a specific focus on emerging areas outside McKesson's traditional core, such as consumerism and the data value chain. Prior to rejoining McKesson, Tom spent a decade in healthcare venture capital, most recently leading the strategic investing effort for Cambia Health and, before that, with Advanced Technology Ventures. His investments include Aperio (sold to Danaher), Helixis (sold to Illumina), Zeltiq (Nasdaq; ZLTQ), Qliance, Wildflower Health and, more recently, Accolade, Evariant, Carena, Kyruus, PipelineRx, and ClearCare on behalf of McKesson Ventures.

Before his venture career, Tom had significant operating experience in the healthcare industry, including strategy and commercial roles at leading companies such as McKesson, Genentech, FitLinxx, and The Wilkerson Group.

Tom holds an M.B.A. from the Wharton School and a B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania. He was also an All-American Rugby player.

www.dlapipertechsummit.com

© 2017 DLA Piper. DLA Piper is a global law firm operating through various separate and distinct legal entities. Further details of these entities can be found at www.dlapiper.com. All rights reserved. Attorney advertising.