Roy Bahat is the head of Bloomberg Beta, an early-stage venture capital firm backed by Bloomberg L.P. that invests in the future of work, with a focus on machine intelligence. He co-chaired, with New America's Anne-Marie Slaughter, the Shift Commission on Work, Workers, and Technology, a national effort to understand the 10-20 year future of work in the US. Mr. Bahat is also a lecturer at UC Berkeley's Haas School of Business and Vice Chairman of the Center for Investigative Reporting, a nonprofit newsroom.

Mr. Bahat has been an entrepreneur, having started a venture-backed videogame console; a public company executive at News Corporation; a board member for companies and nonprofits; and in government in his hometown of New York. He was named one of Fast Company's Most Creative People in Business. He graduated from Harvard College and was a Rhodes Scholar. He is the son of immigrants, husband to a Midwesterner, and parent to two lightning bolts. He lives in San Francisco, where he tries, occasionally with success, to avoid email from Friday evening to Sunday evening.
