Martin Minnoni is the co-founder and CTO of Wibson. He is an MIT-trained mathematician and economist and former IMF researcher in the Strategic Issues Division. He has more than ten years of experience in building tech companies.

Martin is recognized as a leading thinker in data analytics monetization products that take advantage of massive, cross-industry datasets. Most recently, he co-founded Grandata, a San Francisco-based data analytics company that provides a privacy-preserving data platform for companies to monetize their data assets. Wibson.org is a project of Grandata.

Martin has published several publications in peer-reviewed journals and won prizes from KDD for best paper in social networks analytics.
